Task 1.

The science fiction writer, Frederic Brown, is credited to write the shortest story in the world in 1948, which he called "Knock". The story was this: "The last man on Earth sat alone in a room. There was a knock on the door. The story paved the way to a new fashion of writing very short stories which quickly became very popular.

In 1999 Steve Mass published "The World's Shortest Stories of Love and Death" which is considered one of the greatest books of all time. To begin with, it is a real page-turner which you cannot put down just after several first stories. The editor collected the best entries from an annual competition in the "New Times" magazine. Anyone who follows a few simple rules still can enter the competition. The complete story has to contain no more than 55 words, there should be at least one character. Make sure to include a setting, conflict and resolution in its plot.

The book contains stories like "Gratitude" and "Higher Education" which are especially poignant. In "Gratitude" Andrew E. Hunt tells us a story of a homeless person, wrecked by the world but still ~~be~~ being the happiest man on Earth. In "Higher Education" on the contrary, Ron Bass tells about people from the more privileged part of society, however, being arrogant, lazy and reckless. The first story shows the beauty of people's nature while the second one displays the most unattractive people's traits. It is clear that these two stories are extremely different.

In a nutshell, "The World's Shortest Stories of Love and Death" is a marvellous book that should be read by everyone at least once in their life. There are some recommendations for the readers. Firstly, it is wise to read the book in the original in order to understand all the twists. Another great piece of advice is to highlight smart thoughts in the text. All in all, both adults and children like this book. I hope you will adore the book the same as I do.
