Task 1

An outstanding figure in a short-story world is Steve Moss, a person who came up with a peculiar idea of a short story contest. Known under the name 55 Fiction, the competition has several criteria for the stories. A truly 55 Fiction story should be no more than 55 words in length, set the scene, present a few characters ^{and contain} a conflict and its logical resolution.

The best 55 fiction stories have been compiled into a book ~~known as~~ ^{titled} The World's Shortest Stories of Love and Death. The name of the book itself connotes a sense of sarcasm, and so do many stories in it. ^{at first, they} all ~~(at first)~~ immerse ^a the reader into the alluring atmosphere and then take him/her out by a sudden twist in a plot. In the Garden by Hope S. Torres ^{of such a story} is a perfect example, an anecdote presented with heavy irony.

However, while In the Garden is just a story that will make you chuckle, some stories have an interesting philosophical ~~ideas~~ ideas in them. Take, for example, Gratitude, telling us to appreciate what we have; or Higher Education, making the point that we should rely only on ourselves. My favourite is The Search, which ^{shows} ~~tells~~ how ^{vague} the boundaries are between good and evil, truth and lies.

(Personally, I) To my mind, being precise and meaningful at the same time is a great talent. These stories convey universal ideas and are thought-provoking, and even if they are not, you will have a good laugh reading them.
